

IACPR: The Benefits of Membership

The IACPR's mission is to provide the senior-level recruitment community with opportunities to network, share best practices and build cutting-edge expertise within a collaborative environment. The organization's members are professionals whose current and primary responsibilities are focused on executive-level talent acquisition and retention.

Corporate members include company executives responsible for senior-level human resources, staffing, development, acquisition, management and retention.

Retained search members (100% retained) are those consultants specializing in executive-level recruitment.

Consultant members are either engaged in a practice focused on supporting recruitment, development and retention at the executive level or are drawn from academia with primary teaching or research activities focused on issues relevant to the IACPR.

Members receive reduced attendance fees at the prestigious IACPR Global Conference each year – widely recognized as the premier event in the industry – as well as Chapter Events and Teletopics dealing with today's complex issues in talent acquisition, retention and development. For boutique retained search firms, twice-a-year Small Search Firm Forums bring members together to openly discuss all aspects of their business – everything from recruiting talent to winning and retaining clients.

Members can also take advantage of a variety of discounts offered by leading vendors in the recruitment community – including up to $1,000 on new products from Cluen.

But what members cite as the IACPR's greatest benefit is the chance to network with other top professionals in the field – executives who understand the challenges and complexities businesses face and can share their own perspectives on real-life solutions. This is the only forum where experienced corporate recruitment and retained search professionals can come together to discuss talent management issues in an interactive environment built on trust.
